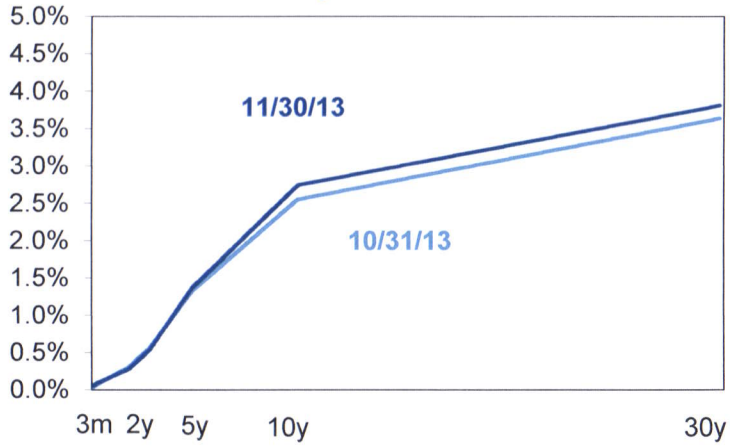
Recent Treasury Yield Curves



Recent data suggest the government shutdown in October did little to slow the growing strength in the broader economy. Reports on housing, auto sales, and manufacturing showed solid gains and retail sales for November rose at the fastest pace in 5 months. Against this backdrop, the Treasury curve steepened during the month. The 2-year Treasury yield declined by 2 basis point to 0.28%, while the 10-year yield rose by 19 basis points, finishing the month at 2.74%.

Most sectors outperformed Treasuries in November. Credit and asset-backed securities beat similar duration Treasuries by 0.38% and 0.20% respectively while agency debentures posted excess returns 0.12%. Mortgage-backed securities trailed by 0.13%.

The FMIvT High Quality 0-2 Year and 1-3 Year Funds returned 0.02% and 0.12% for the month. The primary driver of Funds' modest outperformance was their holdings of asset-backed securities. Benefiting from its shorter-than benchmark duration and underweight to longer-term bonds, the FMIvT High Quality Intermediate Bond Fund outperformed the Barclays HQ Intermediate Aggregate by 0.32%, gaining 0.06% in November compared to a return of -0.26% for its benchmark.

Global Economy

November data showed signs of economic strength highlighted by a pickup in US manufacturing activity and continued recovery in the housing market. Manufacturing accelerated in November at the fastest pace in more than two years as gains in US home sales provided a boost to orders for home-related items and construction equipment. The Commerce Department reported purchases of new homes surged 25% in October as rising consumer wealth from higher stock and home prices helped offset rising borrowing costs. The average rate for a 30-year fixed mortgage was 4.51% at the end of November, up from 3.59% in May.

Federal Reserve policy makers revealed they anticipate US labor market conditions to improve which would "warrant trimming the pace of (bond) purchases in coming months," but are committed to holding rates near zero as long as the unemployment rate remains above 6.5%. Employers added 203,000 jobs in November, while the nation's unemployment rate fell to 7.0%. Inflation remained subdued as declining energy prices led to a 0.1% drop in the cost of living in October from the prior month, while consumer prices climbed 1% from a year ago, well below the Fed's 2% target.

Manufacturing around the world gained momentum with rising production and increased orders pointing to stabilizing growth. Euro-area manufacturing output expanded more than forecast, led by Germany, while UK activity rose to the highest level since February 2011. Consumer prices rose in Japan fueled by higher energy and electricity costs, indicating the government is making progress toward its goal of stamping out deflation.

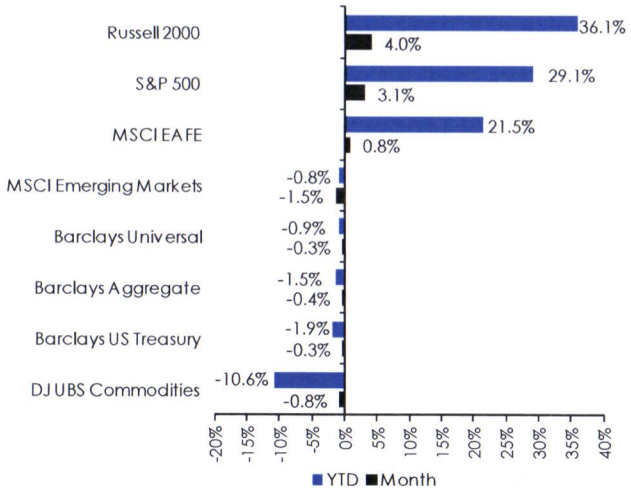
Global Markets

Key Market Indices



Global stocks outpaced bonds and commodities for a third month amid rising optimism that economic growth is accelerating. The MSCI All-Country World index of equities in 45 markets rose 1.8%, following a near 4% gain in October. US stocks closed November with eight consecutive weekly gains, driving the S&P 500 and the Dow Jones Industrial Average to new record highs, while the technology laden NASDAQ Composite Index rose above 4,000 for the first time in 13 years. US small caps posted strong gains, adding to a 36.1% year to date advance on pace for the biggest annual rise since 2003.

European stocks rallied completing a third monthly gain after the European Central Bank (ECB) cut its benchmark interest rate to a record low to stimulate economic activity. The Stoxx Europe index climbed 1%, adding to the nearly 10% gains the last three months. Stocks in Japan rose to six-year highs as the yen declined to six-month lows against the US dollar boosting optimism for Japanese exporters earnings. The yen traded at 102.44 per dollar, the lowest level since May.

China's stock market posted monthly gains after the government pledged to carry out economic reforms reassuring investors that the world's second largest economy could maintain a sustainable level of growth. The Shanghai Composite index increased 3.7% in November as policy makers vowed to ease restrictions on private investment. Emerging market equities came under pressure in November after climbing 12% the past two months.

Commodity prices extended declines for the third straight month as gold fell 5.5% to $1,250.60 an ounce, the most since June. The metal slumped 25% since the start of January. Oil prices dropped after world powers loosened sanctions against Iran in exchange for limits on the nation's nuclear activities potentially leading to more supply.

US interest rates spiked higher in November as investors priced in the probability that improving economic data may convince the Federal Reserve to begin scaling back bond purchases as soon as December. The yield on the benchmark 10-year note rose 19 basis points (bps) to 2.74%, while 30-year yields jumped 17 bps to 3.81%. The spread between the 5-year and 10-year yields widened as investors bet the Fed would stay committed to holding short-term rates lower. US Treasuries posted their first monthly loss since August.

European sovereign bond performance was mixed in November as German bonds were little changed after euro-area reports showed inflation accelerated more than economists forecast, while the ECB cut its benchmark interest rate by a quarter point to 0.25%. Standard and Poors raised its outlook for Spain's debt to stable from negative, but maintained a BBB- rating citing a gradual resumption of economic growth. Spain's 10-year yield rose 9 bps to 4.12%, while Italy's 10-year dropped to 4.06%, the lowest since May.

Brazil's central bank raised its key interest rate for a sixth time since April in an effort to stem accelerating inflation and support a weaker currency. The central bank raised rates 50 bps to 10% this month and 275 bps since April. Brazil's inflation rose 5.78% over the past 12 months, remaining above the central bank's target of 4.5% for more than three years.
