The current fund performance may be higher or lower than that cited. The current seven-day yield does not include realized gains and losses on the sale of securities. The yields shown above may reflect fee waivers by service providers that subsidize and reduce the total operating expenses of the Funds. Fund yields would be lower if there were no such waivers.

Global Economy

The harsh winter weather and a slowdown in employment gains slowed momentum in the US economic expansion that began in March 2009. Sales at US retailers declined in January after colder than normal temperatures caused consumers to scale back spending. The Commerce Department reduced estimates of fourth quarter GDP to an annualized 2.4% compared with the 3.2% estimate issued earlier.

Inclement weather has especially weighed on the US housing market after measures of home sales and construction dropped to the lowest levels in nearly a year. Sales of previously owned U.S. homes declined in January by 5.1% to a 4.62 million annual rate. Higher mortgage rates are limiting affordability for buyers as borrowing costs have risen since mid-2013. The 30-year fixed mortgage rate averaged 4.47% in the week ended February 28, up from 3.59% in early May 2013, according to Bloomberg data.

Concern the euro region is headed toward deflation eased after a reading on consumer prices exceeded economists' forecasts in February. Consumer prices grew at an annual rate of 0.8% in February, dampening speculation that the European Central Bank will initiate new stimulus measures. Japan's economy expanded at a slower than anticipated pace in the fourth quarter after the strongest business spending in two years was offset by weak exports. These disappointing results increased fears that Japan's economic recovery could fade as a sales-tax increase looms in April.

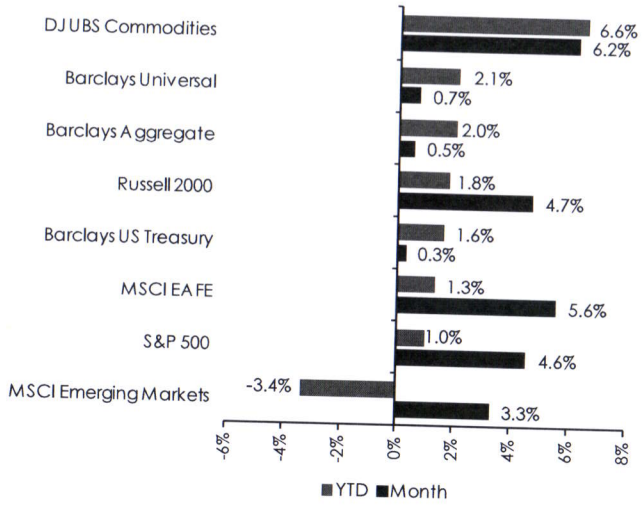
Key Market Indices



US stocks were propelled to record highs in February. The S&P 500 index rose to a new record high after government data showed fourth quarter growth was weaker than forecast, suggesting to investors the Federal Reserve might change its asset purchase strategy. The index reached 1,859.45 on the final day of trading climbing 4.6% for the month, the most since October. Small cap stocks set new all time highs as investors gained confidence that the Fed would continue to support the economy, raising the appeal of riskier assets.

Optimism on improving economic conditions and an increase in mergers and acquisitions during the month spurred a rally in European stocks to six year highs. The Stoxx Europe 600 index climbed 7.4% (USD) in February, the biggest monthly gain since July. The European commission raised its forecast for 2014 economic growth in the euro region to 1.2%, from an earlier 1.1%. Japanese shares capped a second monthly decline amid weak retail sales and a stronger yen which is negative for Japanese export companies.

Chinese stocks overcame weak economic data to post mild gains in February. A gauge of manufacturing activity fell to an eight-month low and the nation's banks curbed lending, raising concerns the economic expansion will ease. Emerging market stocks posted solid gains during the month after Federal Reserve policy makers stated stimulus measures will stay in place raising the appeal of riskier assets.

Gold prices rose to four-month highs in February, helping commodity indexes post their largest monthly gains since July 2012. Oil prices added 5.2%.

US Treasury bonds generated positive returns for a second consecutive month in February as investors bid prices higher in the final days of trading amid escalating political tensions between Ukraine and Russia. The Bank of America Merrill Lynch US Treasury index rose 0.3%, following a 1.6% gain in January. US Treasury yields were relatively unchanged with the 10-year yield fluctuating within a 22 basis point (bps) range in February, the narrowest since April 2007, data compiled by Bloomberg showed. US corporate bonds rallied in February as the Barclays Capital US Corporate Investment Grade index gained 1%, while the Barclays Capital US Corporate High Yield index added 2%.

Investors continued to gain confidence in the Euro zone's recovery from the debt crisis as Greek 10-year sovereign bond yields fell back below 7% for the first time since April 2010 after reaching as high as 44.2% in March 2012. Greek 10-year yields plummeted to 6.96% during the month from 8.61% at the close of January. German yields were relatively unchanged in February, declining 3 bps to 1.63%.

Yields on the US dollar denominated JPMorgan EMBI Global Diversified index plummeted 37 bps during the month to 5.69%, the lowest since November 2013. The drop in yields reduced the premium investors demand to own emerging market debt over US Treasuries to 320 bps from 360 bps in January.

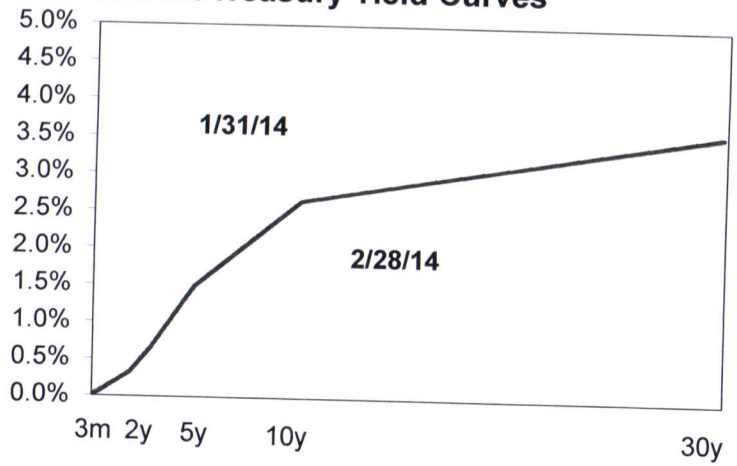
Recent Treasury Yield Curves



Treasury yields were little changed in February and sector returns were tightly clustered around Treasury returns. Though some economic data indicated weakness, the market largely discounted it due to the extreme winter weather in many parts of the country. By month end, some high frequency data had already started to recover (e.g., Chicago PMI, U of M Confidence, etc).

With yields little changed and sector performance muted, the performance of all three FMIvT High Quality Funds were in-line with or slightly ahead of their respective benchmarks in February. The FMIvT High Quality 0-2 Year and 1-3 Year Funds returned 0.03% and 0.09% while the FMIvT High Quality Intermediate Bond Fund gained 0.38%. All three Funds remain positioned with a shorter-than-benchmark duration to protect assets in a rising rate environment.
