Global Economy

After a precipitous decline in the first quarter, economic growth rebounded in the second quarter led by gains in consumer spending. The improvement suggests that the slump at the start of the year was due to weather related forces rather than underlying fundamentals. Gross domestic product rose at a 4% annualized rate in 2Q14, after shrinking a revised 2.1% in 1Q14. Consumer spending, which accounts for almost 70% of the economy, rose at a 2.5% pace, as purchases of durable goods, including autos, climbed at a 14% annualized rate.

Both the US services and manufacturing sectors strengthened in July indicating the economy was gaining momentum heading into the second half of 2014. Service industries such as retailers grew at the fastest pace since December 2005. The Institute for Supply Management's (ISM) non-manufacturing index increased to 58.7, from the prior month's 56. The ISM's factory index climbed to its highest level since April 2011 as orders and production expanded aided by a rebound in auto sales.

Labor markets improved as employers added 209,000 jobs in July, marking the sixth month of 200,000 plus payroll additions, the longest such period since 1997. The improved environment encouraged more people to resume their job searches leading to a slight increase in the unemployment rate to 6.2% from 6.1% a month earlier. The Federal Reserve (Fed) decided to keep its benchmark rate near zero and reduced its monthly bond purchases by the previous planned amount of $10 billion, to $25 billion a month.

Inflation in the euro region slowed to its weakest level in almost five years rising 0.4% compared with a gain of 0.5% in June. The unemployment rate was at 11.5% down from the record 12% in September 2013. China's manufacturing expanded at the fastest pace in over two years.

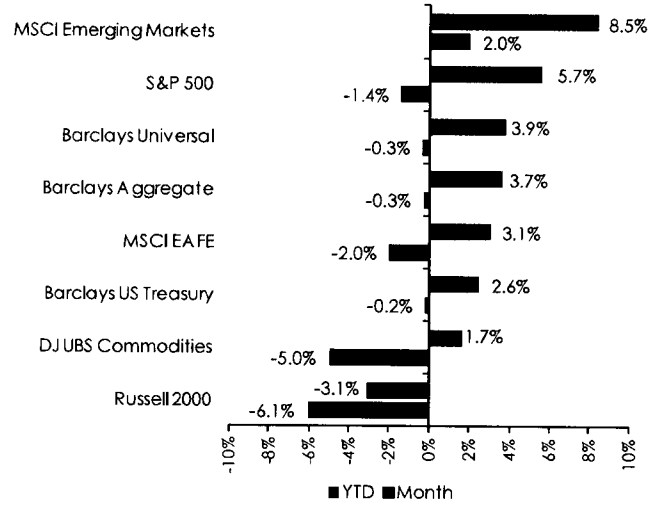
Key Market Indices



Signs of weaker fuel demand in the US led to the biggest monthly decline in crude oil prices in more than two years. Oil prices closed below $100 a barrel after a government report showed gasoline inventories rose to the highest level in four months. Gold prices were pressured from reduced geopolitical tensions.

After six consecutive monthly gains, stocks retreated in July as relatively strong economic reports caused concern among investors that the Fed might accelerate its move to tighten monetary policy. The S&P 500 closed at a record high of 1,987.98 on July 24 before tumbling 2.9% during the final days of trading, sending the index into negative territory for the month. The interest rate sensitive utilities sector plummeted 6.9%. Corporate earnings have been strong for 2Q14, rising 11% from the same period last year. With 455 of the S&P 500 companies reporting, 67% have beat expectations according to Bloomberg data. Small cap stocks sold off last month, as the Russell 2000 posted a loss of 6%, the worst performance since May 2012.

Japanese stocks rose amid stronger than anticipated corporate earnings that overshadowed concerns on how the Japanese economy is weathering a 3% sales-tax increase. Japan's Topix index touched a six year high before posting gains of 1% (USD), the third straight month of positive returns. The index surged 13% from this year's low on April 14. European shares slumped, after Portugal's central bank ordered a Portugal bank to raise more capital, elevating investor fears that the region's financial crisis was not over. The Stoxx Europe 600 index posted its first back-to-back monthly losses in two years.

Emerging market stocks climbed for the sixth consecutive month spurred by gains in Chinese stocks. The MSCI EM index rose 2% (USD), following a return of 2.7% in June. The index has advanced 8.5% this year and trades at 13.4x trailing two-months earnings, according to Bloomberg data. The Chinese Shanghai Composite index rallied 9.3% (USD), amid investor optimism the government's stimulus measures that are targeting infrastructure investments will help stabilize growth.

Accelerating US economic data helped send US interest rates higher in July, as investors adjusted their outlook for short-term interest rates. US Treasury two-year yields rose 7 basis points (bps) narrowing the spread between 10-year yields to 203 bps, the lowest level since May 2013. US Treasuries posted a second monthly decline in July measured by the Bank of America Merrill Lynch US Treasury index that fell 0.2%, matching June's drop.

Investor sentiment soured on riskier US corporate bonds in July. Yields on the Barclays Capital High Yield index posted their biggest weekly increase since May 2012 in the final week of July, surging to 5.7% from 5.3% as investors pulled more than a $1 billion from US high yield bond exchange-traded funds based on data compiled by Bloomberg. The high yield index fell 1.3% for the month, the first month of losses since last August.

Euro zone government bonds advanced spurred by investor confidence in the European Central Bank's willingness to consider additional stimulus measures to help revive the economy and stave off deflationary forces. German 10-year yields declined for the seventh consecutive month, the longest streak since January 2005, ending at 1.16%. Italian bonds gained, as the 10-year yield reached 2.63%, the least since 1991, before closing at 2.7%, down 15 bps from June. Investors have scaled back their inflation expectations for the region, as Germany's five-year break-even rate, a gauge of market inflation expectations, dropped to 61 bps, the lowest since June 2012.

Emerging market bonds posted gains for the sixth consecutive month in July, as the JPMorgan EMBI Global Diversified index climbed 0.4% (USD), adding to year to date gains of 9.1%. Average yields on the index rose 3 bps to 5.14%.
